

The history of hunting dates back to at least the history of humanity. Ancient humans were only hunting to be able to sustain their lives, as modern life took the place of primitive life this need turned into a sport so sport into passion. Despite the fact that hunting is recently perceived to lead animal extinction and to harm the nature, in fact if it is done in accordance with the laws it helps protect and bring the animal generation under control, it enables person to commune and be at peace with nature...

Fias-Cesa Arms Industry, who put this idea into practice as a vision, has been showing outstanding efforts as to respect the nature as well as to produce technological products in the industry since it was established. In the last century, change and development appear in front of us as concepts which are by no means unavoidable. The way to achieve success in today's competitive environment is to keep up with the rapid change. The best way to increase competitive capacity is to enhance the quality by making production efficient and to develop continuously over time.

Fias-Cesa Arms Industry, who has been carried on business in the awareness of change for the duration of his 57 years service since it was established, will protect the image of industry's pioneer company in arms production with new investment and projects using the latest technology.